

Describe an art or craft activity that you had at school Model answer 1

Introduction

Art makes life easier and encourages the development of creative skills. Without art, our lifestyle would be comparable to a black-and-white photograph, and we also initiate countless endeavours with the aid of art.

What you made?

Here I want to discuss calligraphy, the art of decorative and elegant writing I learned in school.

How you made it? And What it looked like?

It was during the summer vacations, while I was in the fifth grade, my school organised a summer camp. My parents put me in writing classes due to my terrible handwriting. I had a difficult time attending courses for a few days because I wanted to enjoy my summer vacation. Still, eventually, a few of my classmates joined me, and I became interested in cursive writing.

It was difficult for me to switch writing classes, but the instructor was patient. She bolstered my confidence and helped me recognise the significance of beautiful handwriting, which is not only valuable for academic purposes but also for a variety of other contexts.

She reminded me that with this expertise, we could produce greeting cards and gifts for loved ones and acquire an appreciation for various art forms. My instructor presented me with a couple of notebooks containing alphabets with dots to practise and correctly follow the shape. In merely two weeks, I could write fluently with extremely attractive handwriting, and both my parents and friends were astounded to realise that I was writing aesthetically rather than scribbling.

And how you felt about the activity?

I also created numerous posters with encouraging phrases written in cursive and posted them in my study space.

Conclusion

I must say that it is a crucial art form that every youngster needs to master to be creative and artistic.

Introduction

- So many events at my school are related to arts and crafts, and now I'd like to tell you about one such event in which the majority of students participated, which also broke a number of records and was a great asset to our school: the drawing competition.

What you made?

- I drew a painting.
- Our sixth-grade instructor assigned us a task during the summer break.
- The assignment was to create a landscape painting.

How you made it? AND What it looked like?

- Since I had much time on my hands, I conducted extensive research to select the ideal subject for my painting.
- In the end, I chose to paint the Ganges river with the Himalayas in the background.
- In order to accurately depict nature on canvas, one must be precise with the use of colour.
- The painting required one week to complete. Initially, I was quite anxious, but I soon achieved flow.
- Beginning on the third day, I began to enjoy every second of my work.
- It was precisely drawn by myself. I had to combine a variety of hues to achieve the desired background hue.
- When I unveiled the artwork to the school, I finally received the school's appreciation. They applauded me enthusiastically.
- I received a trophy and a bouquet of peonies from the school's principal.

And how you felt about the activity?

- That day, I was on cloud nine since that event altered the course of my life and made me a more confident individual.
- After that, I participated in numerous further tournaments, bringing honours to my school.

Conclusion

- The admiration I had gotten on that particular day would forever be imprinted into my memory, and it filled me with immense pride.

Describe an art or craft activity that you had at school Model answer 3

Introduction

As a young schoolboy, I enjoyed many aspects of my primary school, like playing with friends in the schoolyard and sharing lunch with them. However, there was another aspect of my elementary school that I enjoyed immensely: the periodic art and craft sessions. Today, I would like to describe an elementary school activity I participated in.

What you made?

In this particular art and craft activity, cardboard was used to make "photo albums." Initially, I was not particularly interested in art or craft activities since I simply did not enjoy them as much as I did for other school activities. Possibly since I was doing it alone, I did not like it as much as I would have liked. Later, when our school acquired a new art teacher, he realised the issue and chose to group children like us together in order to force us to collaborate. Anyway, it is time to return to the past and describe my primary school "photo album."

How you made it? And What it looked like?

I used some sturdy cardboard, some photo magnet papers, a hole puncher, and some thick binding cords to create this album. First, I cut two sheets of sturdy cardboard to the same size and shape. Then, I trim as many sheets of photo magnet paper to the same proportions as the cardboard covers as I desire. I simply connected or adhered the photo magnet papers to the cardboard in order to stack them in layers. I punched two holes along one side of the stacked layers so that I could thread the cord binders through the punched holes to bind the layers together.

And how you felt about the activity?

Regardless, I felt terrific about this specific art and craft project since I could actually see the results of my labour. In addition, this activity made it possible for me to share some laughs and quality time with other students, which would not have been feasible otherwise.

Conclusion

Finally, due to this exercise, I discovered my hobby, which I used to relieve stress.
