

The increase in the production of consumer goods results in damage to the natural environment. What are the cause of this ? What can be done to solve this problem.? (h2)

IELTS problem and solution model essay 5 (h3)

Check the below given problem solution essay example to solve the writing task easily.

Outline (h3)

Essay type

Cause and solution

Introduction

- Rephrase the statement
- Explain the cause and solution you plan to discuss in a sentence

Body

Paragraph 1 - The main cause towards the huge mass of production and effect in natural resources is because of the people's increase in shopping behaviour for the non-essential things.

Paragraph 2 - This can be addressed by the government and the brands by increasing the green products, eco-friendly packaging, and contribution to the environment's well-being.

Conclusion

Conclude the essay with the explained problem and solution.

Problem and solution sample answer 5 (h3)

Online shopping behavior has widely increased in recent days all over the country after the pandemic. Due to this, every product is available easier at the consumer doorstep. This causes the companies to increase their production than expected and creates huge damage to the environment. In this essay, I'm going to elaborate the cause and provide the solution for it.

To begin with, nowadays people do impulsive purchases of products, they buy most of the products to handle their boredom factor rather than buying for essential needs. Due to this increase in product purchase, many new companies have come into the market. This establishment will lead to improvising their production in all means which in turn leads to deforestation, global warming, air pollution, and water pollution. Also, there are still many industries using plastic as a packaging material, this will also result in damaging the natural resources.

The primary solution to solve this problem is by educating the individual about the impact of their frequent consumption of products in the environment. This can be done by the government by advertising the concept of minimalism which is widely followed by the majority of people. Also, nowadays people are much interested in organic products, recycling packaging and other eco-friendly products and initiatives by the brands. Government should also consider this and support these businesses and also suggest companies to participate in the societal improvements by planting trees and others.

In conclusion, the damage caused to the natural resource is because of people's luxury behavior and also companies' huge production. This can be reduced only if companies shift to green products and the government lends a hand towards it. And, also people are aware of the causes they produce to the environment and reduce the behavior.

(291 words)