Problem and solution sample answer

Making money while studying is a great source for students, however there are many negative impacts that students will face in terms of their mental health and a lack of performance. In this essay, I will give the causes it creates and the solutions to overcome this problem.

The reasons students work while studying is to earn money to resolve their student loan burden and to gain work experience. To manage the cost of studies many students are preferring to get a loan from the banks. There are many banks that offer education loans for students to pursue their studies. As a result, students end-up in getting employment while studying. For instance, students who wish to study in the USA get an education loan from the bank to manage the finance and start their work after admission. In addition, many organisations are looking for candidates who have prior experience in the particular field which makes the students enter into the corporate world while doing their education.

However, there are some things that students who are studying with employment can consider: Factors such as scholarships, flexible hours. There are many scholarship opportunities, grants, and financial aid available for students to pursue their education. Extensive research is needed to find out the eligible scholarships before applying for the admissions. For example, the government is offering many scholarships for different types of programs. Further, there are many organisations offering flexible working hours to manage both their studies and finance.

As a conclusion, it might seem difficult to handle both the academics and employment for students, however it can be handled by utilising the available resources to cover the entire expenses or just tuition fees to avoid debt along with working.
